

CHURCHES TO MARK THANKSGIVING DAY

All Denominations to Hold Special Services—Charity Organizations Active

MANY DINNERS FOR POOR

Regardless of denomination, the city's churches will unite in observance of Thanksgiving Day by special services tomorrow, while charitable organizations will entertain and remember their wards in various ways.

Special dinners will be served at the Y. M. C. A., fraternity houses, the Y. W. C. A. and all the hotels and restaurants, decorated for the occasion, in addition to which there will be special Thanksgiving programs by various young people's organizations. Many holiday dances will be given, including those of the combined chapters of the American Legion Sister Fraternity, at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, and the Young Men's Hebrew Association at the Masonic Temple.

Welfare Workers Happy

For the success of the welfare campaign for $2,700,000, the Welfare Federation will be given a pension in special services of thanks arranged by many of the 121 organizations which are to benefit by the funds collected.

In the community houses, homes for the aged, blind and destitute, and the city's hospitals, the welfare workers will be served, and more than 6,000 orphans and dependent children alone will enjoy their turkey and "fixins'" thanks to the generosity of those who gave freely to the federation.

Most of the twenty-one hospitals will hold open house, where the patients will receive relatives and friends, and dinners will be served to all patients and to participants in the observance of the day. The new children's hospital, the West Philadelphia Hospital for Women, will receive donations, while a special dinner will be served for patients and attendants, as will be done at the Jefferson, Hahnemann, Roosevelt, Germantown, Northwestern General and University Hospitals. At the Roxborough Memorial Hospital, donations will be received and ice cream will be served visitors. The Ladies' Aid Society, the hospital and the Woman's Medical College will be open to visitors from 2 to 4 o'clock, while at the Northwestern Hospital the new children's ward will be open for inspection and a reception will be held from 1 until 4 o'clock.

SALVATION ARMY PROGRAM

The program arranged by the Salvation Army includes "an day of devotion" to be conducted in the Memorial Auditorium, 701 North Broad street, afternoon and evening, by Commissioner and Mrs. Charles Estill of New York. On Sunday, and forty Army officers will attend a Thanksgiving dinner at Engle Hall, which between 5 and 6 o'clock will be the scene of a Thanksgiving dinner arranged for some 200 men and forty mothers and children.

A unique Thanksgiving will be held at the Home of Industry, Seventy-third and Franklin avenues, when a number of former prisoners will return to the former residence. The meals, taken by nearly discharged persons, will be eaten and special services will be held. At the Church Home for Children the boys and girls will attend services in the chapel and later have a chicken dinner. Many of the children permitted to return to their homes for the day. In the Home for Homeless, 1327 Franklin avenue, the inmates will be treated to a chicken dinner. At the Old Ladies' Home, Wissahickon, one of the inmates, aged ninety-four, will be permitted to visit friends, while the other women will be entertained with their friends in the home. At the Clarendon Home, Hulme, Hulmeberg, after Thanksgiving will be created to a big dinner after attending All Saints' Church, Rosemont.

WILL CEASE TO TROUBLE

The Rev. Floyd W. Toulmin, rector of Holy Trinity, will preach in the chapel of the Franklin Penitentiary Working Home on Broad Street at 7:30. Later a turkey dinner will be served.

The Midway Mission, Germantown, will hold outdoor games in the morning, followed by a dinner and dance on the evening.

Former inmates of the Shobering Arms of Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, 515 North Broad street, will entertain guests lunettes at dinner. At the Galtie Mission George W. Wilkins, superintendent, will entertain seventy-five men residents and the staff at a turkey dinner.

Eighty guests will be entertained at the Simon's Church Institute, Second and Walnut streets, members of the military to be invited, the sailors who made the institute.

At the Sunnyside Day Nursery a Thanksgiving play will be given by the older children.

The Harrison Nursery will hold a Thanksgiving party, and many baskets will be sent to worthy mothers in the vicinity of the Franklin Avenue, 710 Jackson, where the children will be given dinner in the nursery.

The Young Women's Christian Association of Philadelphia has arranged special celebrations in its eleven branches. The Germantown Y. W. C. A. will send its Girl Reserves to the Germantown Branch of the Philadelphia Relief, Ripplehouse and Phillips, executive director, special entertainments will be given.

The Western Community House, 301 South street, will conduct a number of fêtes, while the Western Sewn Society, in the same building, will also celebrate.

WHEN SMUGGLING WAS IN FLOWER HERE

SMUGGLERS' CAVE UNEARTHED IN CITY

Old Tunnels Led From Willow Creek to Storehouse for Contraband

FOILED REVENUE MEN

A series of tunnels which have been unearthed at Fifth and Willow streets, where building operations are now under way, are believed to have been the inlet for contraband goods during the Colonial days and up to the time that Willow Creek, which once flowed where Willow street is now, was filled in.

Nathan Pennypacker, who has had a drug store on the northwest corner of Fifth and Callowhill since 1875, says that when he was a young man he heard the history of the tunnels from "Buck" Watson, who at one time kept a combination second-hand store and undertaking shop at Sixth and Callowhill. Watson's story shows what extremes were used to frustrate revenue officers during the earlier days of the country.

The tunnels, which undermine the section bounded by Willow and Callowhill streets on the north and south and Fifth and Sixth streets on the east and west, converge at what is now Randolph and Willow streets.

They are four lengths of passageway running north and south, and seven or eight shorter tunnels which run east and west and serve as connections for the larger ones. The tunnels are built of red brick with arched roofs, and include stairs, ladders, doors and labor was expended in the making.

The converging point was the cellar of an old house that once stood on Willow Creek, a small arm of the Delaware River which flowed through what is now Willow street and which was navigable as far as Tenth street.

Contraband goods, smuggled into the country to escape excise taxes, were loaded up the creek and unloaded at the house, which was the main distributing point. The goods then were taken through the tunnels to other houses which served as points for further distribution at safe places.

Before the Civil War it is believed that the tunnels may have been used as hiding places for Negroes when it was still a profitable business to kidnap slaves from the South.

Another story associated with the tunnels, though somewhat legendary, relates to some of the romance that has been connected with the underground highway.

One of the older members of the Scatterson family went West while still a youth and on his return brought with him a young Indian girl. She died shortly after her arrival, but it is believed that before her death she buried a large amount of gold in one of the tunnels.

Some years ago gold coins valued at $20,000 were discovered at a point directly opposite the old Scatterson home.

Another story concerns the legend of the "Tunnel of Love," which was a secret highway probably according to the history of the Indian girl treasure, that the money found was that mythical hidden fortune.

The honey-combed property is now being excavated and the tunnels filled in preparation to the erection of a six-story factory which will be operated by the Paper Manufacturers' Company.
